Saved Many From Death.

W. L. Mock, of Mock, Ark., believes he has saved many lives in his 25 years experience in the drug business. "What I always like to do," he writes, "is to recommend Dr.
King's New Discovery for weak, sore lungs, hard colds, hoarseness, obstinate coughs, lagrippe, croup, asthma or other bronchial affection, for I feel sure that a number of my neighbors are alive and well today because they took my advice to use it. I honestly believe it's the best throat

Popular Mechanics Magazine
For June.

Like the continuous film of the moving-picture machine which flashes to the mind scenes of interest that would require volumes to describe in print, Popular Mechanics Magazine each month presents a vivid panorama of the world's development in all matters pertaining to science and mechanics. In the June number 290 unusual illustrations and 275 terse articles portray the activities and achievements of inventors, scientists, airmen, craftsmen, mariners—in short, of persons in every walk of life, for nowadays, no occupation but contributes its discoveries and improvements. Apropos of moving pictures, the cover design for the June Magazine uniquely reproduces the unfolding of a rose as depicted in colors on the film by a process, in which color filters are used. This process is described further in an interesting article by J. Q. Roberts

A Father's Vengeance.

Would have fallen on any one who attacked the son of Peter Bondy, of South Rockford, Mich., but he was powerless before attacks of kidney trouble. "Doctors could not help him," he wrote, "so at last he gave him Electric Bitters and he improved wonderfully from taking six bottles. Its best kidney medicine I ever saw." Backache, tired feeling, Nervousness, Loss of Appetite, warn of kidney trouble that may end in dropsy, diabetes or Bright's disease.
Beware! Take Electric Bitters and be safe. Every bottle guaranteed.

Really Hard Luck.

Four men were sympathizing with each other at an uptown hotel, according to the New York Sun. They were employees pretty well up on the staff list and two of them were assistant managers. They had indorsed checks for acquaintances that they supposed were all right, and, according to the rule, had to make good. "I'm worse stuck than any of you," said the chief engineer. "The check I got stuck on was for $114 and the man who signed it is in jail."

Starts Much Trouble.

If all people knew that neglect of constipation would result in severe indigestion, yellow jaundice or virulent liver trouble they would soon take Dr. King's New Life Pills, and end it. It's the only safe way. Best for biliousness, headache, dyspepsia, chills and debility. 25c at all drug-

Algebra to Be Made Into Poetry.

It is reported that a French teacher has invented a system for teaching algebra in poetry. About fifty-five years ago there was an educational system in vogue by which a considerable share of the academic curriculum was set to music and sung by the teachers and classes. Even the multiplication table was one of the songs, with the five columns as a chorus, sung to the tune of "Yankee Doodle."—American Stenography 2,000 Years Ago.

It seems incredible, but it can be proved, already in the olden times there were stenographers who took down the speeches made in the Roman senate or in public. They were called notarii and we find a place in Suetonius where Augustus is angry because the stenographers reported the speech of Caesar for Metellus in a very imperfect manner.

Tragic Dream Came True.

To dream of being mangled by a locomotive and to have that dream come true shortly after he had related it to his companions was the ex-ment of the dream came true, as he jumped for the running board, but missed it and fell under the wheels.

The Beggar Maid

By Annie Hinrichsen

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

Joab Coates had contemplated a lengthy explanation of excellent reasons for building the new branch through the Heath Hall farm.
Perry McCune, in defiance of the commands of the owner of Heath Hall dairy to let her affairs alone, had risen to argue the rights of his unappreciative client.

The door opened and a young woman entered. For a moment she stood, hesitating near the door. She was very pretty and she looked frightened.

"Mr. Chairman," she asked, "may I speak in this meeting? I am Edith Ellston, owner of the Heath Hall dairy."

The chairman, a white-haired man of sixty, smiled assuringly. "Certainly you may speak in this meeting," he decreed. "Come up here and sit down with us and tell us why you don't want the company to buy your land."

As she walked up the room Joab Coates' eyes followed her wonder-ingly.

She sat down near the chairman and smiled with frank embarrassment at the directors. She did not glance at Perry McCune. In the big leather chair she looked very small and very young.

"Mr. Chairman," Joab Coates was on his feet. He was a middle-aged man, tall and thin, with a hard mouth and merry eyes. "Before Miss Ellston speaks I want to say something more. I'm ready to change my mind about splitting up the Heath Hall farm. I don't make no fight on a little curly-headed pretty girl who's tryin' to make her livin' out of cows. I thought she was a cross-tempered, sour, ugly old maid, judgin' her that way just because she beat me on a contract. If she wants to keep her land and run the best dairy in the county I'm ready to help her. Our line will take somebody else's land."

The board broke into a cheer of laughter and applause. For the first time Edith Ellston looked at Perry McCune. He was neither smiling nor applauding. In his eyes was a look that made her own soften and brought to her lips a sudden, new gentleness.

"Mr. Coates," she said when she could be heard, "I came here to fight for my dairy. But—now—now I, too, have changed my mind. I am willing to sell my land to the company and my thoroughbreds to you, if you want them. I have decided to go out of business. The hall I shall remodel and use for a summer home."

"You made a good bargain with the company for your land and with Coates for your cows," remarked Perry McCune as they left the directors' room. "May I inquire, as your attorney, what you propose to do next?"

"Marry you."

"What?"

"That is my intention." She stopped and faced him. They were alone in the corridor of the office building. "I have always wanted to marry you, Perry. I loved you before my father's failure and death.
But you did not ask me then to marry you. You waited till I was in trouble and then you said:

"'Beggar maid, your king deigns to honor you with permission to serve him as his wife.'"

"If you did not use those words you used that meaning. You did not say, 'Marry me, because I love you and want you.' Your attitude shocked from me, I believed, all my love for you and all the hopes I had had that our life together might be a tender, beautiful, perfect thing.

"But today you realized that the beggar maid was entirely capable of becoming a successful business woman.
You acknowledged, without words, when the directors were applauding Joab Coates' change of mind, that the beggar maid had succeeded and that you didn't really mean to be superior or to flaunt your money. And because of what I saw in your eyes and understood, I am willing to give up my cows—don't Perry, dear! You must not kiss me—I mean you must not here—in this public place."

"I adore cows and I intend to devote my life to them."

"To cows?" He stared at her, his understanding dulled by amazement.
"Cows," she repeated. "Thoroughbreds, I shall open a dairy at Heath Hall."

"Why, Edith, you can't. You must not—You—"

"I can, I must and I shall. The settlement of father's estate has left me nothing but Heath Hall. It is a dilapidated old house with a few acres of blue grass pasture. Cows, then, shall be my career."

"You'll marry me. I'll remodel the hall and we'll use it as a summer home. A few thousands will make it quite habitable."

"Oh," she answered indifferently, "I don't care to marry you, not even as a means of support. I know that you are the richest man in the county. But as a business proposition I prefer—cows. But, Perry," she added, "you may, if you like, be my attorney, the attorney for the dairy.
Every thriving, successful business needs an attorney."

"Your attorney's advice to you is to drop this nonsense talk and marry him."

"I intend not to do it."
Several weeks later the proprietor of the Heath Hall dairy came to the office of her attorney.

"It's Joab Coates," she declared bitterly. "He has arranged to ruin my business because my dairy is a great deal better than his and is getting his trade. He wrote me, when I beat him on the city hospital contract, that I should soon find myself without a dairy."

"You beat Joab Coates on the hospital contract? How did you do it?"
"I went before the hospital purchasing board, which for years has

"As a Business Proposition, I prefer—Cows."

bought large quantities of milk from Joab Coates, and asked them to let the contract by bids. They agreed and I won. Now he is trying to ruin my business."

"What is he doing?"

"He is a heavy stockholder in the Capital Electric railway and he has convinced the company that its new branch line must go through my land, parallel my beautiful brook, where my darling thoroughbreds drink, and spoil my farm! If the line goes through my land, taking my brook away from me, I shall have nothing left but my broken-down old house and a herd of pas-tureless cows."

"If Joab Coates wants the line to go through your land it will go. He controls the company and he has sufficient influence with the courts to have your land condemned and sold.
The wisest thing for you to do is to sell at a good price. I'll manage the sale for you and get the highest possible price out of the company.
I'm sorry, little girl, for your disappointment and the failure of your enterprise. But a woman cannot expect to compete with—"

"A woman can," she retorted.
"She can do anything a man can and this woman will. You'll not manage the sale for me. There will be no sale. I shall continue to run my dairy and run it without any man's assistance."

The board of directors of the Capital Electric company was in session.

DESCENDANT OF KING DAVID?

Interesting Question Raised as to Ancestry of Present Occupant of British Throne.

Shall we see a direct descendant of King David seated on the Stone of Jacob on June 22 when King George is crowned? the London Chronicle asks. There are thousands of people who believe so and are ready with a full genealogical tree. There is a warrant for the kings of Judah, but Queen Tea To-phi, daughter of Nehemiah, is rather troublesome. One does not know where she was evolved. She came to Ireland with Jeremiah and the Stone of Destiny, and she married there Eochaidh the Heremon, prince of the Tuatha de Danaan, that gentleman being also a descendant of the royal line of Judah. They were the first in these kingdoms to be crowned on Jacob's Stone, and from them the British Israelites trace the pedigree of our kings. When David, who is the present prince of Wales, is 30, there will have elapsed 100 generations between him and his great Jewish ancestor. They also believe we British are the lost Ten Tribes.

HE WAS IT

"I'll marry whom I please!" said she,
And tossed her little head.
"Hurrah! You're mine! For cer-

You do please me!" he said.

FOR REFORMED ALPHABET.

Shall the world's final script be Roman, such letters as we use, or Arabic or Chinese? The Roman script has by far the best chance and the best claim. Efforts are making to introduce it in China and Japan, and now the effort is making to interest India in reducing its 50 alphabets to a single one.

In the 200 languages of India there are only about sixty-three separate sounds, but it would take some 20,000 characters to represent them in print, as so many are syllabic. But before a Roman alphabet can be adopted it should be reformed.

Simplified spelling is good and can be greatly extended, but a scientific alphabet, made by international conference, is of the first importance to perfect what is called the missionary alphabet.—Independent.

SHE GOT THE PENSION.

An elderly woman called on a lawyer in San Francisco to ask him to have the United States government grant her a pension. She told a sad story of her destitution, and added a glowing account of the heroism her husband had displayed in the Civil war.

"As I understand it," the pension attorney said, "you ask for this pension in the name of the valiant services rendered to your country by your husband."

"No, I ask it in the name of God and his mercy."

"In that case," said the lawyer, "I'll get you your pension. I have very few applications in that name."

A "BAD BOY" WAVE OF CRIME.

The "bad boy" is the cause of the crime wave now under investigation, according to members of the grand jury and also investigators connected with the district attorney's office.
Nearly four hundred persons who had been victims of burglars or thieves told of their tribulations, and whenever any definite knowledge of the criminals was known it was in-

I was so weak that I was down on my back nearly all the time. Cardui has done me more good than any medicine I ever took in my life. I can't possibly praise it too highly."
You need not be afraid to take Cardui. It is no new experiment.
For fifty years, it has been found to relieve headache, backache, and similar womanly troubles. Compos-
